After a gap of a year due to the revised groupings for the competition last year, we welcome back Birmingham Bears in front of the Sky TV cameras. There is no guessing what the theme of the commentary will be.

A Wednesday night under lights, live on TV the audience will be hoping that lightning strikes twice and we can see another record as momentous as Colin Ackermann's 7-18. I still maintain that without the presence of the cameras the record would never have been. The ball to Will Rhodes had the faintest of brushes with the stumps and in the melee nobody appeared to notice the bail had been dislodged until Lewis Hill pointed this out. Without the benefit of the TV replay to prove that Rhodes had indeed been bowled the wicket would not have been given and the record never achieved.
